- (o) An explanation of the following:
 - (i) Unit title property ownership is made up of three components: ownership of a principal unit and any accessory units; an undivided share in the ownership of the common property; and an undivided share in the ownership of the underlying land if the unit plan is cancelled. This means that owning a unit title involves a different set of rights and responsibilities than traditional house and land ownership. Unit title developments also have a body corporate management structure. Every unit owner in a unit title development is automatically a member of the body corporate. The body corporate owns the common property in the unit title development.
 - (ii) A unit plan is a survey plan showing the principal units, any accessory units and the common property in a unit title development. It is a formal record of the boundaries of units and common property.
 - (iii) Ownership and utility interests are assigned to every unit in a unit title development. Ownership interests are based on the relative value of each unit in relation to the others in the same development. Utility interests are the same as ownership interest unless otherwise specified.
 - (iv) Body corporate operational rules are the rules that govern the unit title development. All unit owners, occupiers, tenants and the body corporate must comply with the body corporate operational rules.
 - (v) Pre-settlement disclosure must be provided by a vendor (at its cost) to a purchaser of property in a unit title development no later than 5 working days before settlement in the form of a pre-settlement disclosure statement ("PSDS"). If a PSDS is not provided at least 5 working days before settlement, the purchaser can delay settlement until 5 working days after the PSDS is provided or cancel the contract after giving 10 working days notice in writing to the vendor.
 - (vi) A computer register (also commonly known as a records of title) formally records the ownership of land or a unit in a unit title development and the legal rights and restrictions that apply to that property. Computer registers are issued in respect of principal units and their related accessory units, but no computer register is issued in respect of common property
 - (vii) Land information memoranda ("LIMs") are documents issued by territorial authorities (district and city councils) in respect of a particular property (on request and on payment of a fee). LIMs record information held by the council in respect of rates, special land features, water infrastructure, consents, certificates, licences, notices or orders issued by the council and other information the council considers relevant. LIMs do not contain all of the information relevant to the property such as any information held by the regional council for the area.

- (viii) Easements and covenants are legal documents setting out particular rights and restrictions relating to the use of a property and are recorded on the computer registers of the land affected.
